

Woodstock Chimes' Newest Chime is Blowin' in the Wind
Tuned to the Last Line of the Chorus of Bob Dylan's Classic Folk Song

SHOKAN, N.Y., February 6, 2018 – Woodstock Chimes, the leading manufacturer of musically tuned windchimes, has introduced a chime that not only honors one of Woodstock's most famous residents but also celebrates the wind-powered nature of the company's products. The Blowin' in the Wind Chime[™] (BWC) is tuned to notes from the last line of the chorus of "Blowin' in the Wind" by legendary writer and performer Bob Dylan, and embodies the spirit of the iconic song that was also popularized by folk trio Peter, Paul and Mary.

"I've always said that Woodstock Chimes are musical instruments played by the wind, so it was natural for us to create a Blowin' in the Wind Chime," said Garry Kvistad, founder and owner of Woodstock Chimes and a GRAMMY[®] Award-winning musician. "Bob Dylan made his home in Woodstock, N.Y. through much of the 1960s, when 'Blowin' in the Wind' was written. We're thrilled to pay tribute to one of the most influential songs of the '60s and to an artist who left his mark on our namesake town and the world of music."

Featuring cherry finish ash wood and six silver tubes, the new chime measures 34 inches in overall length and retails for $76. It comes ready to give in a kraft gift box and includes a descriptive hangtag that notes the significance of the chime and its tuning. The chime also has a removable windcatcher that customers can take to a local customization store to further personalize the product. It is available for immediate shipping.
